
As a biannual online journal, RBED was founded in 2014 and publishes papers related to national defense, international security and its related areas, such as national security, war and peace, relations between armed forces and society, science and technology in the context of national defense, military studies, strategic studies, public policy, security and defense, international relations, political science, history, amongst others.

In order to promote the development of defense and security studies in Latin America, RBED encourages the exchange of ideas, discussions of relevant issues to its related themes and a multidisciplinary academic dialogue.

The special edition “The Epistemic Dimension of Defense Studies” will be organised by professors Dr. Samuel Soares (UNESP-Brazil) and Dr. Lucas Rezende (RBED/UFSC-Brazil) and aims to discuss scientific and epistemological approaches to defense. Authors are invited to bring multiple visions on how defense should be studied. Multidisciplinary and multinational views are specially encouraged. Editors welcome international exchange on epistemic approaches to defense studies. Authors are free either to describe their countries’ way of scientifically approaching defense studies or to suggest new ways on how defense should be epistemologically treated.

Papers will be accepted in English, Portuguese or Spanish and must be unpublished. At least one of the submitting authors must have a Master’s degree. Submissions should respect the instructions for authors:
- Articles should contain between 20,000 and 25,000 characters (without spaces) and book reviews should contain about 6,000 characters (without spaces); footnotes are restricted to additional clarifications to the text and should be synthetic. URLs for references should inform the date of access;
- Texts should be single-spaced, 12-size font, with use of italics and/or bold, avoiding underlined passages;
- References must be cited according to the Chicago system (author, date), referencing the literature cited at the end of the text; in the case of book reviews, it should also contain its complete data and ISBN. Examples:

- Concise titles (maximum of 80 characters, including spaces) in Portuguese/Spanish and in English are requested;
- Papers must be accompanied by at least 4 keywords and abstract with up to 50 words in Portuguese/Spanish and in English;
- Submissions not in accordance with the guidelines to authors will not be accepted for evaluation and its proponents will be duly communicated. We kindly ask authors to complete reading of the guidelines for authors, which can be accessed in Portuguese at: http://seer.ufrgs.br/index.php/rbed/about/submissions#authorGuidelines. Questions regarding submission instructions can be addressed to lucas.rezende@ufsc.br;
- All papers accepted for evaluation will undergo a double blind peer review.

RBED receives submissions on a continuous flow, but only papers received up to January 20th, 2016 will be considered for the Vol. 2 No. 2 – July-December 2015 edition. Papers on other topics regarding defense are also welcomed and will be considered for publication.

Submissions should be done at: http://seer.ufrgs.br/index.php/rbed/about/submissions#onlineSubmissions.
